MENTAL HEALTH TASK FORCE REPORTS

Access to Resources

Gwen Bartley provided an update on the minor, whose father was a guest speaker late last year, as well as the family. Ms. Bartley stated the minor is still living in a group home, but comes home on the weekends for visits. The minor attends and alternative school and has completed the tenth grade. He is in an accelerated program; plans are that he will be able to graduate from high school in December.

Ms. Bartley also reported research has determined Cabarrus County has adequate and appropriate outpatient services for mental health. Barriers discovered in connection with the outpatient level are financial. Many of the providers do accept uninsured persons and Medicaid. However, the services are expensive and many people are unable to afford them.

Additionally, the next level of services that includes intensive in-home, day treatment and therapeutic foster care are generally available only to children with Medicaid; leaving a huge dividing line of available care for all. A few facilities exist in the State for private pay, but only on a case-to-case basis, limited beds and again, very expensive.

The task force will continue to identify barriers and finalize the report to share with all community resources.

A discussion ensued.

Crisis Response

Sonja Bohannon-Thacker, reported this task force examined if all first responders knew what to do in a mental health/substance use crisis. The findings were that all first responders knew what to do and were equipped to do so. The task force established the issues arose once a patient arrives at the hospital especially for a short term stay. The task force will be looking into the issues further and try to determine what supports can be put in place to improve patient care; preventing them going from crisis to hospitalization to crisis in a two to three week period. The task force will continue to report back on progress.

Public Awareness

The task force met with the faith community to discuss their possible involvement and assistance in the mental health and substance use crisis.

This year the Art Council included mental health and substance use in the Dose of Reality annual art contest. Over 120 pieces of artwork were submitted by local students.
